And yet, strangely enough, I cannot write about love for You (although I write about You so much in my poems), because I do not know what love is. Itâ€™s just that something suddenly hooked me strongly, like lightning struck my dark soul, as if I felt Your presence, and suddenly, like a lightning strike, like an electric discharge, my world lit up, and I saw Your pure and bright Light, and recognized You and realized that You are my God and Savior.
